AN APPROACH TO COMMUNITY BASED TOURISM DEVELOPMENT

Prof. Dipanvita Chakravarty
Professor,
Bharati Vidyapeeth College of Architecture,
Navi Mumbai

ABSTRACT

The present paper discusses a case of community based heritage tourism in the pristine village of Garli, Himachal Pradesh. The place has potential to develop as a tourist destination owing to its rich architectural heritage and splendid landscape. Garli does not find its name among the well known tourist destinations of the Himachal region but the place has immense potential and has also been declared as the first heritage village of India. The present paper discusses a community based tourism development plan involving the local community at Garli so as to boost tourism and economic empowerment.

PROLOGUE

Community based tourism development not only empowers the local community but also provides the tourist with choices according to his exploratory needs, experiential journey, cultural ethos, economic choices and also the activities he or she wishes to undertake. Village tourism can have many perspectives depending upon one's cultural background, age group, whether travelling solo, with family or in groups and the experience that the one is looking for- either entertainment, relaxation or adventure.

The present case provides an excellent and pristine ambience for relaxation in a splendid natural surrounding with enthralling built spaces and exceedingly warm hospitality.

Garli is a small Himalayan hamlet in the Kangra district of Himachal Pradesh. With a population of around five thousand the village showcases a curious amalgam of various architectural styles. Since the early inhabitants migrated from Rajasthan and settled down in Garli as wealthy traders who could hire European architects, there are many Portuguese styled Chateaus in Garli with brick jaalis, decoration at the eaves and Rajasthani chhatris.

In the later half of the sixteenth century, traders from Rajasthan migrated to Garli owing to its pristine beauty, natural security rendered by the surrounding hills and central location with respect to Delhi, Kabul and Shimla, where the trade links extended to. Soon a wealthy township came into being with neatly laid roads, state of art infrastructure, chateaus designed by European architects whom the rich inhabitants could afford. Many new architectural styles were explored demonstrating curious amalgamation of Rajasthani chhatris with European column capitals, Islamic arches and Hindu corbels as seen in the Judges court Praggur.
