1.1 Description:

Based on the criteria of 7.3 Institute Distinctiveness, we have identified numerous activities that align with our potential focal points. This is due to the valuable opportunities they offer to both our students and faculty members. BVCOA has consistently prioritized its affiliation and advancement, primarily emphasizing diversity and social progress. After much contemplation and extensive discussions, we arrived at the realization that there is a specific domain in which our active engagement has remained steadfast, unaffected by geographical distances and challenges. This domain has significantly contributed to the advancement of both our students and faculty, as well as our institution as a cohesive entity. This domain is none other than the Indo-French Workshops (IFW), which consequently gave rise to the establishment of the International Collaborative Studio (ICS) in France. While our partnership with Ensapl, Paris and Ensa, Toulouse dates back to 2009, it was formally solidified into a 'Memorandum of Understanding' with Ensapl, Paris during the 2014-15 period. This collaboration has since resulted in significant academic endeavors that are rich with promising potential.

1.2 Aim and objective of the Indo-French Workshop (IFW) and International Collaborative Studio (ICS) in France :

1.2.1 Aim:

Our aim of the Institute Distinctiveness criteria 7.3 aligns with the vision of the Institute i.e., "Social Transformation through Dynamic Education".

These workshops typically focus on community development and documentation, and aim to provide participants with a holistic understanding of the various factors that impact the built environment. While,

1.2.2 The key objectives of these workshops include:

- Developing cross-cultural understanding: One of the primary objectives of international collaborative workshops is to foster cross-cultural understanding and dialogue between participants from different countries and cultural backgrounds. This can help participants gain a deeper appreciation of the unique challenges and opportunities associated with different built environments.
- Sharing best practices and knowledge: International collaborative workshops provide a platform for sharing best practices and knowledge related to community development and documentation. Participants can learn about innovative design techniques, sustainable building practices, and effective community engagement strategies from experts and peers.

- Hands-on learning: These workshops typically involve a hands-on learning approach, where participants work on real-world projects in collaboration with other students and professionals. This can help participants develop practical skills and gain valuable experience in working in a team and managing complex projects.
- Building networks and partnerships: Collaborative workshops provide an opportunity for participants to build networks and partnerships with professionals and peers from different countries and cultural backgrounds. This can lead to future collaboration opportunities, job prospects, and new research projects.

1.3 Benefits of the Indo-French Workshop

There are several benefits of international collaborative workshops i.e Indo-French for architecture professors and their students to participate, that focus on community development and documentation. Some of these benefits include:

- Exposure to diverse perspectives: International collaborative workshops bring together experts and students from different countries and backgrounds. This exposure to diverse perspectives can help students and professors expand their understanding of design, architecture, and community development.
- Development of cross-cultural communication skills: Working in an international collaborative environment requires effective communication across cultural boundaries. Participating in such workshops can help students and professors develop cross-cultural communication skills that will be valuable in their future careers.
- Networking opportunities: Collaborative workshops provide an opportunity to network with experts and professionals in the field of architecture and community development. This can help students and professors build relationships that may be useful for future collaboration or job opportunities.
- Exposure to new technology and techniques: Collaborative workshops often involve the use of new technology and techniques in architecture and design. Participating in such workshops can help students and professors stay up to date with the latest trends and innovations in the field.

In conclusion, international collaborative workshops that focus on community development and documentation offer numerous benefits for architecture professors and their students. From

1.6 International Collaborative Studio (ICS)

Under the MoU (See: Table 1.4) signed with the ENSAPLV, Paris and ENSA Toulouse of France, we have been conducting The International Collaborative Studio (ICS) like an exchange program for students usually happens during their 8th sem, that stands out as a distinctive feature of our institution. It serves as a catalyst, inspiring students to unleash their fullest potential, embrace novel learning experiences, and conquer new challenges posed by unfamiliar environments and academic curricula abroad. In certain instances, exceptional performance during these semesters abroad opens doors to coveted internship programs in France—a privilege earned by accomplished individuals. Such is in these cases listed below.

In a rigorous process involving thorough evaluation by esteemed faculty members from ENSAPLV and BVCOA, standout students are chosen. Their remarkable achievements over the past year have positioned them as an ideal candidate. As a result, very few have been chosen to participate in the International Collaborative Studio hosted by ENSAPLV in Paris and ENSA Toulouse marking their 8th semester. Also some students are fortunate enough to secure internships their in France which helps to develop much diverse academic portfolio while posing them challenges to adjust the current change in demands and regulations.

Student's Feedback	I knew I had seized an opportunity. But, living alone in a foreign land, miles away from home seemed difficult, and I had my own sets of inhibitions. It was challenging and overwhelming at the same time. Ofcourse, it isn't a cakewalk to live with complete strangers who don't speak the same language as you, and who don't have the same culture as you. (My host family wasn't fluent in English, but as I had an intermediate level in French, I could easily have decent conversations with them in French.) At times, words and thoughts that couldn't be understood through language were expressed with awkward hand gestures and nods. But, at the end it was all worth it.

Student's Feedback

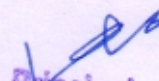

"My internship at Baumschlager Eberle Architekten in Paris has been an eye-opening experience that has profoundly shaped my perspective as an architecture student. Immersing myself in a different working environment presented both exciting opportunities and unique challenges.

One of the most striking differences was their design philosophy, which emphasizes precision, simplicity, and sustainability in every project. I was deeply impressed by how seamlessly they integrated these principles into their workflow, from initial concept to execution. The collaborative process stood out, with interdisciplinary teams engaging in meticulous planning and discussions—a contrast to the more individual-driven approach I was accustomed to back home.

Adapting to the pace and high expectations of the firm required me to step out of my comfort zone. However, it also honed my technical skills and enhanced my ability to communicate ideas effectively. I gained hands-on exposure to cutting-edge tools and techniques while working on live projects, which has been invaluable for my academic and professional growth.

Overall, this internship not only expanded my architectural knowledge but also gave me a broader cultural and professional perspective, reinforcing my passion for sustainable and innovative design."

boundaries in a way that challenged me to rethink my approach to architecture.
Living in Paris brought its own set of opportunities and challenges. Managing everything independently, from housing to daily essentials, taught me resilience and adaptability. The cultural diversity and vibrancy of the city were inspiring, but navigating a new language and culture added complexity to my experience. Despite the challenges, this journey has significantly broadened my perspective, both as a student of architecture and as an individual, and I am deeply grateful for this opportunity.

Student Feedback

My internship at an architecture firm in Paris was a transformative experience. It provided me with the opportunity to work on projects that challenged my creativity and adaptability. The working environment was vastly different from what I had encountered academically. The design process was more collaborative, fast-paced, and detail-oriented, with an emphasis on practical implementation and client interaction. I learned to integrate local architectural styles and sustainable practices into designs, which added a new dimension to my understanding of architecture.

Living and managing everything far away from home was equally challenging yet rewarding. Adapting to a new culture, language, and daily routine pushed me out of my comfort zone. It taught me resilience, time management, and independence, skills that I am sure will benefit me in my career and life ahead. Overall, the experience broadened my perspective and gave me valuable insights into the global architectural landscape.

Brief about the (Activity/Event)	The Indo-Bangla-Korean-French workshop provided an immersive experience into the heritage of Puran Dhaka, focusing on exploring its streets and understanding the sense of living and community within the area. Through rigorous day and night excursions, students engaged in firsthand observation and interaction with local residents to gain insights into the cultural nuances present in different parts of the neighborhood. They documented architectural features, daily life activities, and social dynamics, contributing to a comprehensive understanding of how cultures evolve within urban spaces. This experiential learning approach enriched the students' academic experience by providing a deeper appreciation for the complexities of cultural heritage preservation and urban development.
Remarks	For a variety of compelling factors, including visa challenges, the cost of the trip, scheduling constraints, workshop duration, and other unmentioned commitments, only one student from BVCOA was able to participate in the workshop. However, this single participation from BVCOA along with other academic partners and their students generated significant buzz and garnered extensive coverage in the local media, capturing the interest of the public. As a result of the workshop Ketaki Bhole and Atharva Thorat who were participants to Indo-French Chitpur 2024 were chosen to represent BVCOA to ENSAPLV, Paris in International Collaborative Studio (ICS).
